A TRIBUTE TO RANA HAMMAD

A fine thorough gentle man,
A great leader, a worthy man
He has crossed life's border,
On the Almighty's order
But he is here, in our hearts,
Even if it's time to part

Experiencing Gliding (Oct, 2013)

For we can't break the shackles of times,
Cause we are bound, not free like rhymes
Your time is predestined in scrolls of life,
But we assure, your excellence will survive
So, let's not mourn for he has gone,
Let us move on, not be forlorn

Rehan Chaudhry (3149-A)

THE INEVITABLE

Since the Head boy has parted
For days nothing has same way started
The sun still rises
The warmth is not the same
Birds still sing
The joy is not the same
Trees still dance
The rustling is not the same
Night still falls
The silence is not the same
Moon still glows
The sight is not the same
But we've to move on
'cuz life is a game
Its roulette will surely roll
May Allah bless his soul.

ANNUAL DRAMATICS

Hasnat Khalid (3097-Fn) laid the scene. As the curtain rose, Captain Dallas, a crippled war hero played by Shehryar (3131-T), was seen handling his rather intimidating maid (Hamza Sarwar 3113-A), who left him alone on that snowy evening to face many shocks. He was entrusted with a secret formula by a scientist, Granville Hughes (Asad Talha 3187-Fn), which he guarded against all odds despite being crippled. He effectively dodged the fake cops with help of a drunk, James Pollock (Qaim Abbas 3292-A) who later on, revealed to be the actual Inspector he was waiting for. Once the secret formula handed over to the actual inspector, things got sorted out and Captain Dallas had no more "shivering shocks". Hamza Sarwar, the smart maid servant of the play, was declared the best actor for playing his role to perfection. The cast and director were heaped with lavish praise by audience during the tea after the play.

After tea, the Urdu Dramatics Club staged "Passay Aiana Koi Aur Hey" directed by Sqn Ldr Abdul Munium Mehdi. Mujtaba (3130-Sf) laid the scene. The play highlighted a crucial reality of life in a lighter vein that appearances are mostly deceptive. Ibtisam (3148-T) who played character of a care taker of a bungalow had to deal with numerous other characters in an effort to rent out the rooms and look after the house. He had to deal with a very conniving servant (Aqid Tufail 3057-F) that master mind to loot the bungalow. He faced the crooks that came pretending as lunatics from the Mental Hospital. The most interesting part was, perhaps, tantrums of the chicken hearted feather weight poet, Umair Ansar (3069-Sf).

He disclosed to be an inspector at the end and his timely planning saved the poor caretaker from serious consequences. Aqid Tufail was adjudged to be the best Urdu actor for his versatile acting skills.
